STAIN REMOVAL

October, 16, 2003

"It's easy now to get food stains out of your favorite linens. I'm Narsai David to say that I just did a series of experiments with two different things that had been highly recommended.

One is a product called Erado-Sol, that's E-R-A-D-O dash S-O-L. It's a commercial product and it's designed specifically for stain removal and the other is a technique that was developed by some students at University of California – Davis for removing wine stains and that's a mixture of equal amounts of Dawn Liquid Detergent and 3% hydrogen peroxide. That's the percent that you buy in the grocery store as hydrogen peroxide.

Well, here's what I did. I took a cotton napkin and I stained it with red wine that I let sit for a whole week and then I had red wine that was left just overnight. I took a piece of kale and really scraped it down onto the fabric to leave a deep green stain. I did the same with a cranberry, with a strawberry, with a beet and with some currant syrup.

And, I want to tell ya, both of these things came out really well. Actually, the Erado-Sol did the best job on the red wine that had been left overnight. It really made it cleaner!

Here's a phone number if you want to call them, 1-800-525-6262.
